

KEEPING DAIRY COWS & CALVES TOGETHER...

a revolution in dairy farming

We are farming in a way that's kinder and healthier for our cows, our staff and the wider environment. We aim to make more food available and at the same time use less resources. We believe that putting the health of the whole farming system - animals, landscape, people and environment - first, we are creating a more robust food system for the future.

We believe our revolutionary farming system is:

Healthier for cows and calves - the cow rears its own calf and is milked just once a day. Our cows will have a productive life nearer 3 times that of an industrial cow.

Healthier for people - our holistic approach to farming and organic principles makes for an almost guilt free ice cream.

Healthier for our environment - our farm emits less than half the green-house gasses and has 400% more biodiversity than an average dairy farm.

The happiness of the herd was the main reason we decided to make such innovative changes to the way we farm. Mother and calf are now never really separated and after the calf is naturally weaned they are kept next to each other where they can continue to chat, rub noses and strengthen their bond.

Of course, we don't like to keep the cows inside any longer than we have to and as soon as the grass starts growing the cows and calves head out to enjoy the green, lush pastures of our Galloway fields.
